1. Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

In claim 1, line 7 "said wall said housing" does not make sense and has no antecedent basis.

In claim 5 "a curved recessed adjacent" does not make sense, and "said cylindrical side wall" and "said extensions" have no antecedent basis.

In claim 8 "said peripheral wall", "said reduce portion", "said housing", "said recessed of" and "said sheathing" all have no antecedent basis.

In claim 9 "and LED" does not make grammatical sense.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

a. Claims 1-4 and 6-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chen et al. in view of Below et al. and Ellis et al.

Chen discloses an Ethernet switching hub comprising a casing including a wall, plural connector assemblies for RJ45 type connections, and a quick disconnect connector adjacent the connector assemblies. Such an arrangement in the prior art conventionally includes an Ethernet switch controller with transceiver or equivalent wired connections to the connector assemblies.

In order to have connector assemblies usable for industrial purposes, Below teaches desirability of using sealing o-ring means at the connector assemblies to prevent water damage (see abstract, Fig. 7).

Furthermore, Ellis teaches desirability of using o-ring means to seal quick disconnect assembly from water damage (abstract, Fig. 5).

It would have been obvious to utilize sealing means as taught by Ellis and Below in conjunction with an Ethernet switching hub as taught by Chen, in order to allow a switching hub to be utilized in an industrial environment without being subject to water damage.

Regarding claim 2, Chen teaches having quick disconnect means to the side of the connector assemblies (Fig. 6).

Regarding claim 3, Below teaches use of peripheral flange and sealing ring in groove (Fig. 4B).

Regarding claim 4, Below teaches use of a threaded nut 64 to secure assembly to casing.

Regarding claim 6, Below teaches use of recesses for receiving projecting ears of connectors (Fig. 1A), which is conventional in the art.

Regarding claim 8, Ellis teaches use of sealing ring with quick disconnect connector (Fig. 5).

3. Claim 10 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

4. Claims 5 and 9 would be allowable if rewritten to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, set forth in this Office action and to include all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Hall, Payson and Isely disclose connector assembly devices.
